SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

- (a) All definitions included in A.S. 2401 §3 are to be construed equally for the purposes of this Act unless otherwise noted.
- (b) “Civil honour” is used to designate orders and decorations that are awarded by The Sovereign in recognition of achievement and service of the highest forms.
- (c) “Military honour” is used to designate orders and decorations that are awarded by The Sovereign in recognition of exceptional service, bravery, or courage in the course of military service.
- (d) “Reasonable proximity of blood” is used to designate those individuals whose blood proximity, either patrilineally or matrilineally, does not exceed three generations in either direction.

- (e) “Royalty” and “royal” are used to designate those individuals belonging, either by blood or appointment, to the royal house by virtue of reasonable proximity of blood vis-à-vis The Sovereign.
- (f) “Nobility” and “noble” (or “peerage” and “peer”) are used to designate those individuals who:
 - (i) Do not belong to the royal house per §§(c) but who have been granted a non-royal title by The Sovereign; or,
 - (ii) Do (or do not) belong to the royal house per §§(c) but who also maintain their own non-royal title in their own right, either by blood or appointment.
- (g) “Subsidiary title” is used to designate titles that are held by an individual by virtue of that individual holding a higher title.
- (h) “Heir apparent” is used to designate those individuals who are next in the line of succession to a title and whose right to inherit is indefeasible as long as he or she outlives the current title holder.
- (i) “Heir presumptive” is used to designate those individuals who are next in the line of succession to a title, but whose right to inherit may subsequently be defeated by the birth or appointment of a nearer heir.
- (j) “Succeeding heirs” or “successor heirs” are used to designate those individuals who, should they survive those preceding them in the line of succession to a title, including the heir apparent or heir presumptive, may reasonably become the heir apparent or heir presumptive to the title.
